At College Hall, a meeting of the Ohio delegates was held, which comprised about half the Ohio delegation to the Liberal Convention, and which turned out to be very stormy Judge W. E. Sloane, of Port Clinton, was called to the chair. A large number of delegates made speeches, and some of them were denunciatory and exciting, while others counled moderation and consideration. Among the most preminent were Judge Hoadey, who was one of a committee on resolutions.

He said that Judge Stanley Matthews, the tem-perary President fand John W. John as well as himself, had left the Convention in disgust. NEW YORK. NEW YORK, May 4. The naval stores trade is unsettled. The new rop is coming forward liberally. The receivers seem anxious to crowd everything into market and secure the going rates. The receipts of new turpentine for the week reach 1.332 barrels, making the stock now offering 2,500 barrels, against 1,300 for the same time last year. There has been a decline of about four cents from the highest point of last week's prices, clos-ing at 58% cents per gallon. Pale Rosin is coming in freely; the stock of strained rosin in the yards here is about 14,000 barrels. The export demand has been checked by an advance in the last 12 days of 75 cents per harral. Tar is relatively scarce on the market.

Our best wishes attend the Convention. We hope it will be a great success. We hope it will put us in the way of dividing the Congressional oligarchy so as to render the machine-work of the President more dangerous than it would be if he were backed by a united party and insure us a fair count of the vote in the House of Representatives, where the change of a dozen members would render a fraud impossible.

[From the Chicago Times] Let the generals keep in mind this fact, for it is a fact which the end will certainly prove, namely, that the thorough union and thorough determination which are necessary to success, and which are represented in the popular impetus which the movement has acquired, cannot be realized by marking out a new path. The path which the popular instinct has marked out in the spontaneous popular uprising to which form and direction were first given only path that is likely to end in success.

[From the Washington Patriot.] The men who will assemble at Cincinnati hold in their hands the desiny of the republic. They can, if they will, restore republican liberty to the country, and honesty and capacity to the administration of the Government. They can, if they can be found is at an advance of 25 will, present a platform and ticket which will attract to 'heir support a large majerity of the people of the United States. The responsibility is with them. We will not permit ourselves to doubt that they will meet it with proper discreetness and a stern integrity of purpose.

> [From the Hartford (Conn.) Times.] It is a Republican movement, with which Democrats have hothing more to do than to look on, but they are interested spectators, and those who see clearest are desirous that the great meeting at Cincinnati May 1st shall make no mistake. Such delegations as Connecticut sends will do upon the action of that Convention.
